More than 100 lives, it is said, are admitted to have dynamiters, and the confession tells of property losses of more than $3,-500,000 from dynamite explosions.

When James McNamara, of Cificin-When James McNamara, of Chicin-nati, Ohio, and Ortie McManigal, of Chicago, said to have been the travel-ing dynamiters, were arrested in De-troit on April 12, they were charged, as a blind, with being wanted in Chi-cago for safe blowing. As no such crime was ever committed by the men, the labor leaders declare it was illegal to bring them back to Chicago for such an offense which did not exist.

McNamara Suspected "Plant."

The men knew they were innocent of a safe blowing "job" in Chicago and are said to have agreed readily to come back, signing waivers of extradition without complaint. McNamara, however, evidently suspected a "plant" before he left Detroit, for he tried to get the station agent there to aid in his release, claiming he was being kidnaped In spite of his protest, he was thrown on a train and rushed to Chicago. Here the case assumed a turn which smacked of the Russian police methods, labor leaders declare. Instead of being taken to police headquarters, the men were taken tothe home of Detecfive William Reed, in South Chicago. They were separated, and William J. Burns, of the Burns National Detective Agency, his assistant, and city detectives began putting them through an in-terminable "third degree." ferminable "third degree."

Capt. Stephen Wood, chief of the Chicago detective bureau, denied today the charge that the men were mistreated.
"McNamara and McManigal were brought here from Detroit by Detectives Reed and Beddinger, of my force, who, however, were acting under the direc-tion of William J. Burns, of the Burns By the time they reached Chi cago McManigal was ready to confess. It was at his own suggestion that he and McNamara were taken to Detective Reed's home. They naturally didn't want to spend a week or more in a tiny cell in police headquarters if they could have good beds in a private home.

"McManigal wanted a lot of time to consider the confession, and wanted to confer with McNamara regarding the details of it. They were kept for a week in Detective Reed's home, and were treated more like guests than prisoners, though, of course, they were un-der constant surveillance.

No "Third Degree" Methods. There was no need for third degree

They were not in the custody of the police department; they were held by city detectives working at the time for the Burns agency. I was not at the house, but I had constant reports, and I know they were well treated. "McManigar had a stenographer with McManigal was arrested here several months ago to explain possession of a large quantity of brass, which he had stored in his workshop. He was released without trial.

The police are making a determined effort today to locate a woman who was seen often in McNamara's company, when the latter was with McManigal and Mrs. McManigal. The officers say she knows more about the movements of McNamara, and would make a valuable witness for the prosecution if she It is admitted that McNamara and Mc

Manigal had been under police surveil-lance here for more than two months and that every movement they made was reported. The police intimate that detectives of the Burns agency actually saw the two men in the act of exploding bombs in recent outrages since they have been under surveillance. No arrests were made, however, until Detective Burns felt his chain of evidence in the Los Angeles Times case had been

Los Angeles Authorities and Leaders of Organized Workingmen Prepare for Speedy Hearing of Testimony on Dynamite Outrage.

John J. McNamara, James W. McNamara, and Ortic E. McManigal arrive here to face charges of complicity in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building they will be given speedy day not only by Chief of Police Sebastian, but by the leaders of affiliated organizations.

The labor leaders conferred all of yesterday in secret and today are said to have completed plans for the defense of the prisoners. The first step to be taken, it is believed, will be an application for a writ of habeas corpus, where by it is hoped the accused men will be released. It is asserted that they were simply kidnaped by the detectitves employed by William J. Burns and that they had no opportunity to consult attorneys or offer a defense. Twenty More Arrests.

A representative of the district at torney said today that not less than twenty men will be arrested in a few days charged with complicity in the Times affair although Police Chief been taken by the alleged gang of Sebastian says nobody is under surveillance. The representative of the Burns agency, on the other hand, declared that labor leaders here and in San Francisco have been closely watched for more than two weeks.

Joseph T. Timmons, general organizer of the Structural iron Workers here, charges the worst kind of tryanny to prisoners, asserting that their constitutional rights have been invaded. There is a good deal of excitement among the rank and file of the unions, and a repetition of the scenes attending the trials at Boise, Idaho, of Moyer, Haywood, and Pettibone is predicted when the men are brought out. Burns Sure of His Men.

Burns has telegraphed the mayor here that his net of evidence is of such fine mesh that not one of the labor men arrested can escape conviction. The message added that Burns intends to trace the actions of the men from the time a launch was hired to carry dynamite to California The dynamite so transported was used in the wrecking of The Times office. That all the evidence which Burns has collected against the accused men grew out of a comparison of bits of brass on the backs of alarm clocks has been admitted by the detective. loccur.

He knew that he was being shadowed and that officers of the Iron Workers' Union were calling up his various offices to locate him. Some of his efforts at this time were to throw off shadows.

He next found that the three men of the Pastime had lodged in a furnished room in the Mission district of San Francisco. From the landlady he obtained a still better description of the three, and certain remarks she had overheard still further convinced him that he had his men. Still more, he found in the room a paper that contained the outside wrappings of fuses and a large trunk left by the three men. This trunk Burns considers of importance in his case. Some information that the landlady gave him was a useful clue.
